Chapter IV – On the Behavior of the Administration: Includes the restriction on the Statutory Auditor to provide consulting services to the Company, a practice that was regularly observed but had not been included in the Code. Regarding internal control, it defines the bodies in charge of its implementation and verification and their main duties. This chapter also includes provisions regarding the Corporate Audit Committee.

Title V – Trading of Securities: Stipulates the prohibition on ISA’s administrators and workers to trade with the Corporation’s securities when they are in possession of material information, and includes a definition of material information. Chapter I: Corporate Reference Framework

The Integral Management Model, a framework that helps to align, focus and categorize the Company’s acts, guides ISA’s corporate management. This model consists of three basic elements: Strategic Direction, Day-to-Day Management and Cultural Transformation. Strategic Direction is the element that gives sense to the Organization’s choices in order to accomplish its major goals. Day-to-Day Management includes the daily activities of planning, execution, verification and correction of processes that result in the fulfillment of the mission and the vision, as well as in the achievement of corporate goals. Cultural Transformation seeks to develop abilities and conducts necessary to obtain the Organization’s goals through process management.

Strategic Direction includes the continuously updated Corporate Reference Framework, made up by the mission, vision, values, principles (Code of Ethics), policies, Good Governance Code, and the strategy designed to achieve the vision.

Mission and Vision

A description of ISA’s mission and vision can be found in the Corporation’s Web page.

Values

In order to accomplish its commitments in a transparent, respectful and effective manner ISA centers its corporate activities and commercial, labor and institutional relations around parameters of ethics, attitude of service, permanent learning, teamwork, self-control, flexibility, optimism, effectiveness, persistence and social responsibility.

Code of Ethics

The Code of Ethics is the Company’s letter of introduction to the market, society and its members that outlines the basic principles and mutual responsibilities of the Company and its workers.

Adhesion to the United Nations Global Pact

In 2005, ISA joined the United Nations Global Pact initiative and adopted the ten conduct and action principles on human rights, labor, environment and fight against corruption proposed by it.

Corporate Policies

Corporate Policies are corporate decisions that define criteria and action frameworks to direct management in specific matters at all organizational levels. Once adopted, they become behavior guidelines that are mandatory and non-negotiable. Their aim is to reduce uncertainty and to channel efforts so as to achieve the Company’s corporate purpose.

ISA’s Corporate Policies can be found in the Corporation’s Web page.

Corporate Social Responsibility

As part of its corporate purpose, the Company carries out corporate social responsibility actions for which it has identified its interest groups and defined its commitment to each of them.
Chapter II: Services and Revenues

ISA is a leading company in the provision of high-voltage energy transmission services in Colombia. Since its establishment in 1967 it has had a strategic role in the development of the Colombian power sector. It is the main transmission company in the country and the only one with national coverage. Besides owning a very large portion of the National Transmission System (STN), it owns international interconnections with Venezuela and Ecuador and is strategically located in the center of the Latin American power market.
Energy transport services

The Company’s core business is the transport of electric power through the STN from the generating companies to the traders, who are the major purchasers of energy generated in Colombia.

ISA transports energy not only in Colombia, but also, through its subsidiaries, in countries where it has stakes as constructor and operator of transmission lines; it has as well, interconnections with neighboring countries that help to link and interconnect Central American and Latin American countries.

Energy Transmission

Considered as the dynamic element of the energy market for enabling competition in generation and commercialization activities, it creates conditions for carrying out the distribution activity and promotes efficiency and service quality.

In order to timely satisfy its customers’ needs, ISA has Energy Transmission Centers strategically located throughout the country in charge of guaranteeing availability of the transmission lines and substations under its control. The efficient, timely and high-quality maintenance of its grid added to specialized techniques for preventive and corrective maintenance result in high availability indices in the system.

The grid owners must allow access for energy transport to every market agent; they must also abolish every entry barrier to the National Interconnected System (SIN) and promote competition.

The STN links regional transmission systems and local distribution systems in an interconnected network that serves approximately 98% of total energy consumed in Colombia.

Revenues earned by ISA for the Energy Transport Service (STE) provided through the National Transmission System (STN) constitute regulated revenues and are determined by the Energy and Gas Regulatory Commission (CREG). They must be enough to cover investment costs (including capital opportunity costs), as well as administration, operation and maintenance expenses.
Regulated revenues earned by transporters are paid by the trading agents through the application of the regulator’s decisions.

ISA is responsible for its equipment availability and correct maintenance scheduling. Additionally, together with users connected to STN, it is responsible for maintaining the STN voltage wave as defined by the regulator. It is not responsible for the expansion of the grid, the implementation of solutions to reduce operational costs due to network technical limitations, or for rendering ancillary services.

Regarding STN expansion, ISA is a voting member of the Transmission Planning Advising Committee (CAPT), and as such, it can propose the incorporation of new lines and substations to the STN. It also makes proposals at the invitations to bid defined by the Ministry of Mines and Energy (MME) for projects included in the Expansion Plan of the Mining and Energy Planning Unit (UPME).

Connection to the National Transmission System

This service includes connection of customers (generating, distributing, and regional transmitting companies and large consumers) to the National Transmission System; preparation of technical, financial and environmental studies to determine viability of connection to the STN; supplying, construction, operation and maintenance of assets required for connection to the system; replacement of assets in the event of total loss or exhaustion of useful life.

ISA provides connection services to entities with access to STN, enabling the transport of large energy blocks through STN, which is the physical medium for commercial exchanges between producers and consumers in the Wholesale Energy Market.

The integral connection service provided by the Company includes studies of electrical connection to STN, as well as construction, operation and maintenance of corresponding facilities. Any user willing to be connected to the transmission system must subscribe a connection agreement specifying connection costs and procedures for equipment administration, installation and maintenance.

Connection charges are determined by the methodology established by CREG for each connection point, taking into account the investments made by the Company.
in connection equipment at such point plus their cost of administration, operation and maintenance.

- Related Services

  Taking advantage of its infrastructure and technical expertise in energy transport, ISA develops new products and services for other power sector companies and the industry in general, as in the case of dark fiber.

Selection

The methodology for personnel selection at the Company permits to ascertain and measure the competencies, knowledge, thinking and acting of each candidate. This process consists of different stages guaranteeing selection of the best candidate; such stages are: Recruitment, Selection, Hiring, and Adaptation.

Performance Management

Performance management is a natural process inherent to human talent management aiming to achieve systematic and periodic planning, follow-up and evaluation of the performance of the individual and the group, as well as the contribution of the workers to reach organizational objectives.

Goal Agreeing

Under the direction of the Chief Executive Officer, the Deputy Manager or the director, and taking into account the expected results, the indicators defined in the Integral Management Chart and the actions and activities included in the Development Plan, a process of goal-agreeing, action-defining, and resource-allotting or budgeting, is developed to reach proposed goals.

Every ISA worker is responsible for his performance, according to the role, a process that must be led by the CEO, the deputy managers and the directors.

Follow-Up

The purpose of this permanent activity is to facilitate control of the performance management process to the directive body.
Evaluation

It is the review of both individual and group results, duly supported. Evaluation uses the results of the Development Plan and the Integral Management Chart which are disclosed to the whole organization.

Relay or Succession Plan – Replacement Charts

The Corporation has a Relay or Succession Plan explained in ISA’s Replacement Charts for managers, deputy managers, and area directors. Chapter V: On labor relations

The Corporation recognizes the workers’ right to unionize and it always negotiates with them directly, in terms of mutual respect, under the rule of law.

There are two types of labor agreements between the Company and its workers: the Collective Bargaining Agreement and the Labor Contract.
TITLE IV. On the Behavior of Management
Chapter I. Mechanisms to set, evaluate, and verify results of the activities of managers

Based on its own goals, the Corporation evaluates and verifies the results of its administrators and workers.

Charged with the direction and management of the corporation, the CEO designs the Strategic Direction and submits it to the Board of Directors for approval, defining financial, customer, market, productivity, efficiency, organizational learning and human talent development perspectives, as well as how and in what areas the Company will develop its activities, including entrepreneurial objectives, associated goals, and indicators to measure results.

The Strategic Direction defines the design of the Integral Management Chart, the Development Plan and the Budget, instruments to evaluate all levels of entrepreneurial management: Board of Directors, CEO, area managers, deputy managers, directors, and workers.

The Integral Management Chart

It has as a goal the systematic and methodic measuring of results and entrepreneurial management. The phenomena to be measured and the expected results are defined at its planning stage, in such a way that they shall determine the individual and collective behaviors that have been judged favorable to the enterprise and vital to attain its vision, entrepreneurial objectives, and implementation of the strategies defined, taking into account the four managerial perspectives: Financial, Customers and Market, Productivity and Efficiency, and Organizational Learning and Human Talent Development. The Integral Management Chart permits decision-making and its evaluation, according to results obtained.

The Integral Management Chart design and follow-up is a process that replicates itself at all organizational levels through a balancing system, to obtain an integral management chart for each area in the four management perspectives defined.
The Development Plan

It is the instrument to pinpoint entrepreneurial acting, and contains the actions required to reach the goals set by the Integral Management Chart; just like the previous one, it replicates itself at all organizational levels. The Development Plan is structured under a cause-effect model consisting of four levels: General Objectives and their goals, Specific Objectives and their goals, Actions, and Activities.

The Budget

It is the planning of the revenues and expenditures of the corporation according to the objectives defined. This financial management tool permits planning, follow-up and control of the operations of the Corporation, facilitates decision-making and shows the short-term effects such decisions will have on the financial condition and indicators.

The approval of the budget corresponds to the Board of Directors, and its preparation and execution to the CEO.

The budget permits follow-up of corporate commitments, as well as earmarking of the financial resources of the Corporation.

Through the management instruments established, each hierarchical level of the Organization evaluates monthly the compliance of the goals and achievement of objectives; troublesome points are analyzed and proposals for improvement are determined.

Once analyzed by the Management Committee, the results are internally disclosed to the Organization by means of either presentation to all its work areas and groups or via Intranet.

Chapter II. On the control

The controls of the Organization are of two types, depending on their external or internal nature.
1. External control bodies

External Controls are basically those conducted by the Statutory Auditor, the Superintendency of Public Utilities, the National General Auditing Office, and the External Auditing for Multilateral Banking. Also in this category are the actions by the Financial Superintendency.

1.1 Statutory Auditor

- Election

The Corporation shall have a Statutory Auditor with his respective alternate, who shall substitute him in case of absolute, temporary or accidental absence, elected by the Shareholders’ Meeting for one (1) year, susceptible of reelection for three (3) additional terms.

For this election, the Company, considering the requisites established for the position, and according to the Contracting Regulations, shall issue the corresponding invitations. After evaluation, the Corporate Audit Committee shall present a proposal to the Shareholders’ Meeting, whereupon an eligibility order is established.

- Requisites

The Statutory Auditor must be a firm of acknowledged renown that meets the requirements of the articles of incorporation and the law, as well as those established by the creditors of ISA.

Inasmuch as possible, ISA’s Statutory Auditor shall also be the statutory auditor for all of its subsidiaries.

- Remuneration

The Statutory Auditor shall earn the remuneration defined by the Shareholders’ Meeting.
Responsibilities

The Statutory Auditor shall have the duties determined by the Law and the corporate bylaws.

Restrictions and incompatibilities

Besides the restrictions and incompatibilities determined in the Law and in the bylaws, the Statutory Auditor shall not, either directly or through third party, provide consultation services or activities or execute any type of contract at ISA, which might compromise his independence, nor is he to hold this position at ISA or any of its subsidiaries, for over four (4) consecutive terms.

Statutory Auditor’s Report

ISA’s Management will permanently keep the Statutory Auditor’s latest report available in its Web site for the market, shareholders, and investors.

1.2. Superintendency Of Public Utilities

According to Laws 142 of 1994 and 689 of 2001, the Superintendency of Public Utilities is in charge of controlling the management of the company, either directly or through the External Auditor of Management and Results. This latter is hired by the Company, but he reports to the Superintendency any situation jeopardizing the financial viability of the corporation, failures found in the internal control, and general views regarding the audited company’s management.
